

Chapter 9

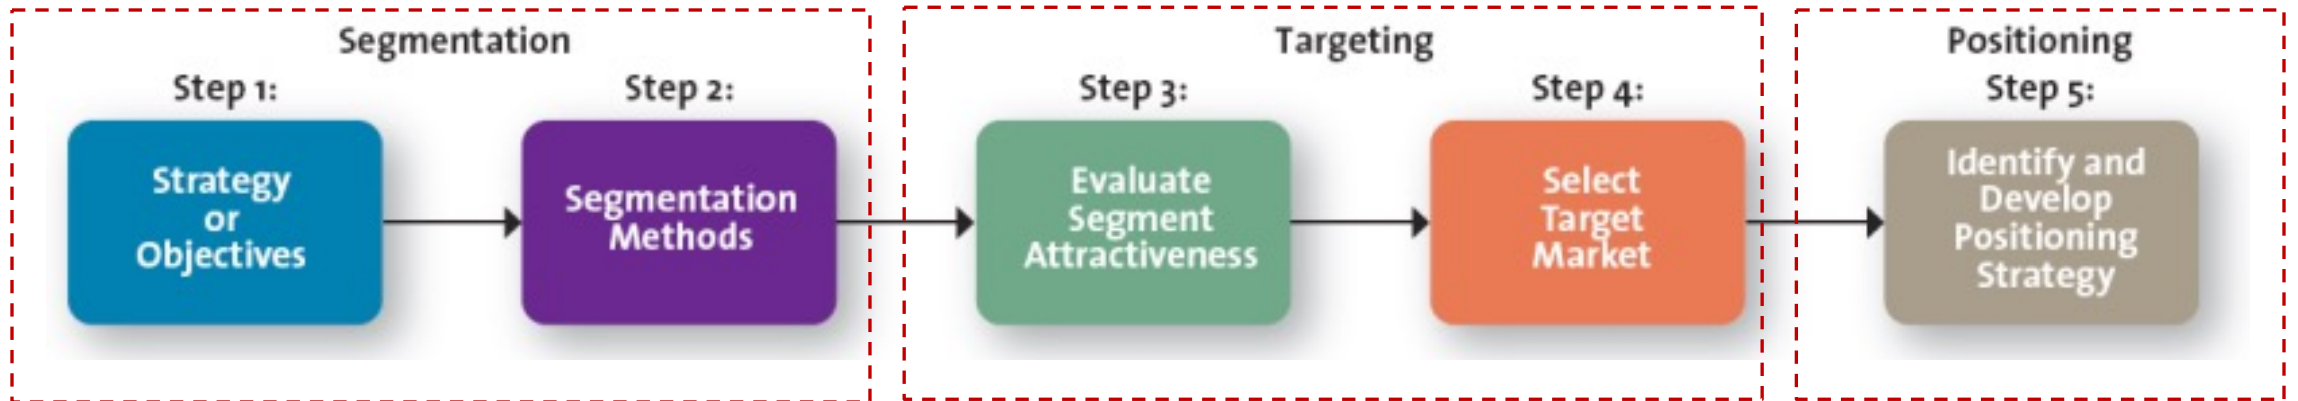

STP: Segmentation, Targeting, and Positioning

- Outline the different methods of segmenting a market
- Describe how firms determine whether a segment is attractive and therefore worth pursuing
- Articulate the differences among targeting strategies: undifferentiated, differentiated, concentrated, or micromarketing
- Define positioning and describe how firms do it

The big picture

STP Process

Important for group projects

Segmentation strategy MUST be consistent with

- Firm's mission/objective
- Firm's current situation (SWOT)

"Coca-Cola's objective is to increase sales in a mature industry." If this is our objective:

1. What research should we be doing about our consumer?
- 2. Who is our consumer?
3. What benefits is he/she seeking?

The above questions lead you through the STP process.

“We’re focusing our innovation efforts on doing what Coca-Cola has always stood for and does best – which is to deliver emotional and functional uplift – in bigger, bolder, more differentiated ways,” said Brandan Strickland, brand director, Coca-Cola Trademark.

“Coca-Cola with Coffee is a true hybrid innovation that provides the perfect solution for that mid-afternoon pick-me-up we all want, especially in today’s work-from-home environment. We’re fulfilling this need state and occasion in a uniquely Coca-Cola way.”

Segmentation is the process of dividing the market in segments

- 1. Identify segments
- 2. Describe segments → Helps the firms better understand different consumers profiles and similarities across segments

Step 2: Segmentation Methods

Segmentation Method	How are consumers divided?	Sample Segments
Geographic	Depending on their geographical location	Continent: North America, Asia, Europe, Africa. Within the United States: Pacific, mountain, central, south, mid-Atlantic, northeast
Demographic	Depending on their demographic information	Age, gender, income
Psychographic	Depending on how consumers describe/think about themselves	Lifestyle, self-values, self-image
Benefits	Depending on the benefits they derive from the product or service	Convenience, economy, prestige
Behavioral	Depending on how they use the product or service	Occasion, loyalty

Geographic Segmentation

- Consumers organized on the basis of where they live

McDonalds has a strategy of standardization, in fact, in order to be recognize as a global brand the company produces a range of standard products. The best example is the Big Mac known all around the world. Indeed in 1986, the magazine The Economist created the Big Mac Index to compare the purchasing power between countries this shows that this burger is the legendary product of the firm.

However, McDonalds has to face cultural differences within each contry. This is why they adapted the concept of « Think global, act local ». They had to adapt their foods in each country due to legal, religious and cultural food habits. For example,

- in the Arabic World they launched the MacArabia which is a Grilled Chicken/Grilled Kofta sandwich with a pita bread.
- In Japon they created Teriyaki Burger, it is a Big Mac with a sweet and dark Teriyaki sauce and mayo.
- In Norway, they launched the McLaks which is a Grilled Salmon sandwich
- In France, they serve a McBaguette. A sandwich made of typical French bread and others French ingredients.
- In Canada and New England you can order a McLobster. Its primary ingredients are lobster and bread.
- For the Asian World they decide to serve the McRice Burger. It's a burger with rice formed into buns with beef or chicken meat between.

Psychographic Segmentation

- Consumers organized on the basis of lifestyle and values

Using psychographic segmentation, Dove's "Real Beauty Pledge" campaign features photos of "real" rather than "aspirationally" beautiful women.

Psychographic Segmentation

- Consumers organized on the basis of lifestyle and values

Using lifestyle segmentation, Harley-Davidson has four main target markets: On the left is its core segment consisting of men older than 35 years. The ad on the right targets women older than 35 years.

Behavioral Segmentation

- Consumers organized on the basis of how they use the product/service

When the product or service is consumed

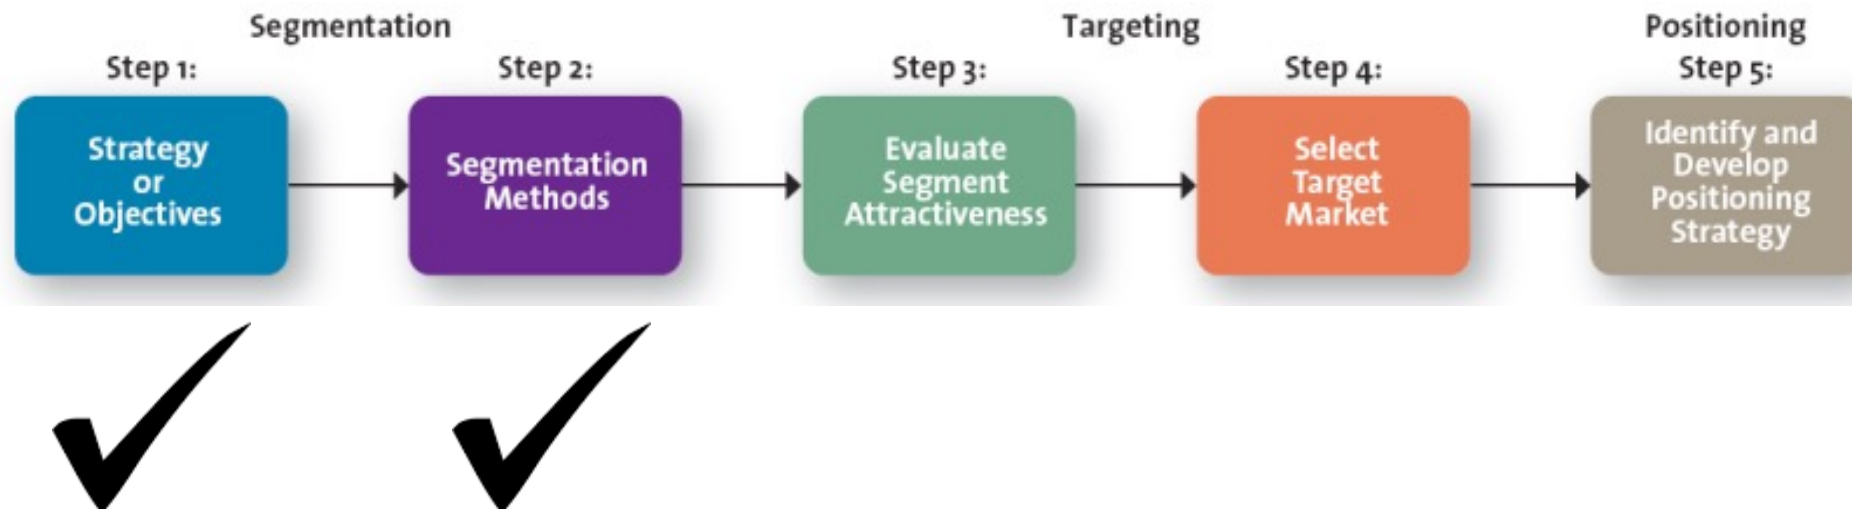

Invest in retaining most loyal customers

Behavioral Segmentation

- Consumers organized on the basis of how they use the product/service

Targeting is the process of selecting the market segment(s) to which the firm would like to sell their products or services

Step 3: Evaluate Segment Attractiveness

Identifiable

- Which consumers are in the segment?
- Are the segments distinct from one another?
- Does each segment require a unique marketing mix?

Substantial

- Too small → Not enough profit
- Too big → it may be impossible to craft a message that resonates equally with all the members of your chosen segment
- Effective segmentation is critical for the success of a product

Reachable

Know the product
exists

Understand what it can do

Recognize how to buy

Responsive

Customers in each segment must:

React positively to firm's offering

Accept the firm's value
proposition

Benefits to be received from a product or service

Trust your firm!
(Reputation, ethics)

Step 3: Evaluate Segment Attractiveness

Profitable

	Homeowners	Businesses
Segment size	75,000	1,000
Segment adoption percentage	1%	20%
Purchase behavior <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Purchase price • Frequency of purchase 	$100 12 times	$500 20 times
Profit margin percentage	60%	80%
Fixed costs	$400,000	$1,000,000
Segment profit	$140,000	??

Assume a restaurant is trying to market its new business.

- Using a differentiated marketing strategy, the restaurant can appeal to the college crowd by marketing cheap specials on food and drinks, the family crowd by marketing kid-friendly meal options and table entertainment and to the elderly by marketing senior discounts and early-bird specials.
- Using a concentrated marketing strategy, the restaurant can market its convenient location to a group of residents within 10 miles of the business.
- Using an undifferentiated marketing strategy, the restaurant can highlight its grand opening celebration.

Step 5: Develop a Positioning Strategy

Positioning is the process of defining the 4Ps such that the target customer have a clear understanding of what the product or service does and represents with respect to the competition

Step 5: Develop a Positioning Strategy

Positioning is the process of defining the 4Ps such that the target customer have a clear understanding of what the product or service does and represents with respect to the competition

It helps communicate the value proposition

Step 5: Develop a Positioning Strategy

Positioning methods

- Value (relationship price to quality)
- Salient attributes (those more important to the target market)
- Symbol (what it comes to mind when you think of Colonel Sanders?)
- Competition

What sets your product or service apart from competition? You offer a similar product, but your company takes it to the next level! (Think about your unique value proposition).

Step 5: Develop a Positioning Strategy

Generally speaking, think about the following questions:

1. What does your brand stand for?
2. What are your target consumers?
3. What are your mission and vision?
4. What makes you stand out from the rest of the market?
5. What customers' need your brand can address?
